0 of 0 review helpful Not really for young kids but great for my trip planning with kids By Sean A Short book written by 2 girls about their trips to many National Parks across California and Oregon. My own daughters in elementary school were not interested in checking out travel literature even when it's written by other kids. However I found the girls' accounts of their trip very helpful in planning our own trips to. This one of a kind publication highlights fun things for kids to do as you explore the national parklands of California and Oregon. While accompanying their parents on a trip that entailed work for the National Park Service on the natural resources of nine of our west coast national treasures, Jenna and Laura decided to do a little scientific research of their own. The fruits of their labor together with detailed journal entries are cleverly crafted into a delightful GRRREAT reading for all kids and their families. Yvonne McMillan Interpretive Ranger, Lava Beds National Monument. I'm constantly on the lookout for park related books for my nieces and nephew. Tonnie Maniero, Biologist, National Park Service.
